HOW DOES MELATONIN WORK?

In nature, the breeding season of animals is primarily influenced by the length of daylight hours. When its duration increases, animals understand that the warm season has arrived, suitable for breeding and raising offspring.

Our pets are kept in warm apartments, where the light is on every day until night. Such comfortable living conditions lead to disruption of natural cycles. Sexual heat occurs frequently and regardless of the time of year.

Melatonin in the composition of the drug naturally regulates sexual desire. The pet simply “thinks that winter is not the time for reproduction,” so the symptoms of sexual heat recede. And with them all the problems — aggression and agitation.

According to veterinarians, sterilization or castration is the best and safest solution to problems of contraception and sexual behavior.

But many owners find it difficult to decide to take this step immediately. Some people think that the pet is still small, the heat is not so pronounced, aggressive behavior can be tolerated, but for others it is very scary to take their furry friend to surgery.

In such cases, contraceptive drugs temporarily solve the problem.

But how do you choose the right one for your pet?
